IN CHAPTER 11, YOU CALL THE SHOTS

Chapter II bankruptcy allows a company to operate as a debtor in possession. That means while in bankruptcy, your company will continue to operate under your control. The company will continue to supply goods and services to customers while paying bills for continuing operations and payroll as they come due. Aside from monitoring and documentation, the courts generally take a hands-off approach to your day-to-day business. Meanwhile, we work to restructure your debt so your company can emerge from bankruptcy on solid financial ground.

Highest Recommendation

"Neil Sader and The Sader Law Firm receive my highest recommendation! All items were thoroughly handled in a timely manner, and all calls and emails were promptly returned. Neil and his associates provided solid advice based on an in-depth understanding of bankruptcy law. Their knowledge and experience in dealing with recent changes to bankruptcy law was particularly helpful. I am very pleased to recommend The Sader Law Firm, as their advice and counsel provided confidence and peace of mind in a trying time."

RELIEF FROM YOUR SECURED LENDER

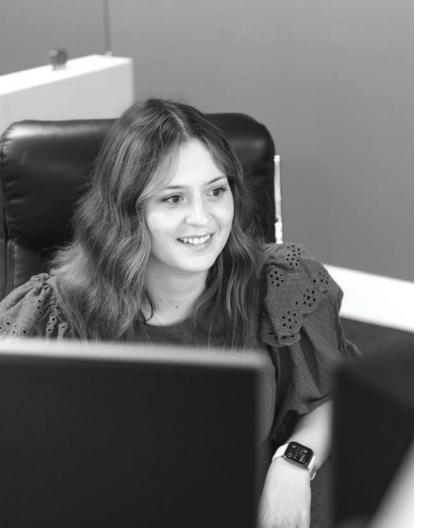

The most immediate relief for many companies upon filing bankruptcy is a possible reduction in payments to a secured lender, often a bank. Secured creditors must be provided adequate assurance while your company restructures, but one of the benefits of Chapter II is that you have a say in what is considered adequate. The creditor does not have carte blanche to set payment terms.

You will propose payment terms in the form of a monthly budget, which will be developed with the help of your attorney. If a secured creditor does not agree to those terms, the parties bring the matter to the court for approval of what is called a cash collateral budget. This is also for the purpose of allowing the company in bankruptcy to use its accounts receivable, which may be pledged as collateral, for its continued business operations.

STOP ALL PAYMENTS ON UNSECURED DEBT

A second benefit is the immediate halt of payments toward unsecured debt. During its restructuring period, your company will not make any payments on its past-due unsecured debt, and those creditors are not allowed to pursue collection efforts without court permission. If your company has unsecured debt held by vendors necessary for your ongoing operations, it is possible to get permission to pay those creditors.

Your company will see immediate financial benefit from this freeze, as well as the time and breathing room needed for restructuring.

REORGANIZE DEBT INTO AFFORDABLE PAYMENTS

The ultimate goal of Chapter II bankruptcy is the filing, confirmation and implementation of the Chapter II plan. A case can often take six months or more to gain approval of a Chapter II plan. A company can have up to five years to pay back past-due tax debt. It can also restructure (and often reduce) secured debt into more reasonable terms based on the value of the business at the time of the filing of the Chapter II case. The creditors must abide by the terms of the plan once the court approves it.

You will have substantial input into the formulation and preparation of the plan – the payments are on terms as allowed in the Bankruptcy Code and often very favorable to the debtor company. Some plans call for the payout of debts to unsecured creditors over what can be a 10-year period of time, with no interest. Once the plan is in effect, a company can exit bankruptcy and continue operations without further court oversight.

TAXES IN CHAPTER 11

Chapter II bankruptcy can be incredibly helpful for businesses facing tax issues. All past-due federal, state and local taxes must be dealt with in Chapter II. Whatever the issue, many companies have used Chapter II as a way to reorganize obligations relating to income tax, sales tax, withholding tax, property taxes and any other requirements.

Generally speaking, taxes are not dischargeable, but there are some exceptions. Companies in Chapter II are allowed up to five years from the filing date to pay any past-due tax that is not dischargable. Federal and state governments cannot object or appeal as long as totals are properly scheduled.

In many ways, the government can become the company's most supportive creditor in Chapter 11. The only requirement for the company is to stay current on all taxes that come due after the filing.

PROCEDURES UNDER CHAPTER 11 OF THE BANKRUPTCY CODE AND RULES

Cases start here – The voluntary petition is filed and the order for relief is entered. The deadline for filing the statement and schedules is 14 days after the order for relief is entered.

Notice of case is entered. Debtors must file tax returns 7 days prior to meeting of creditors. The 341 meeting is held. Motion to use cash is filed with the court. A cash collateral hearing is held. The court will determine if the debtor has rights to use cash collateral.

The appointed creditors' committee holds meeting and selects counsel. The committee investigates the debtor, monitors business operations and provides information to creditors. The committee makes and submits recommendations ahead of the confirmation hearing.

The periodic report is issued. Tax returns are due. Periodic reports will continue to be due at various times up until the time of discharge.

Conclusion

Motion to lift stay is filed. The stay expires 30 days after filing of motion unless court continues. Preliminary hearing is set. Stay terminates 60 days after motion unless court renders decision. The final hearing is held.

Business schedules cannot be extended for later than 30 days after order for relief. Proof of claims must be filed in time fixed by court. Deadline for debtors to file proofs for creditors is 30 days after creditors' deadline.

Cases end here – If there is an objection to disclosure statement, there will either be an objection to confirmation hearing or a ballot. Both will have a hearing on confirmation. The order confirming plan is filed. After completion, the discharge of debtor is filed, then there will be a discharge hearing. Or there will be a consummation of plan and a final decree to be filed.

After estate is fully administered, the court enters a final decree to close the case, and the debtor continues to perform under the plan for the determined period of time for the bankruptcy. It can take up to five years for the debtor to receive the discharge. Unless there are objections, the court uses the Official Form to grant discharge, and the court may hold discharge hearings in the cases of individual debtors.

CHAPTER II BANKRUPTCY FAQS

Who is eligible to file Chapter 11?

Any individual, and almost all forms of businesses, are eligible to be a Chapter II debtor. There are some exclusions; for example, a trust cannot be a Chapter II debtor unless the trust is a business trust.

What should be done to prepare for filing a Chapter 11?

The first step should be finding and retaining an experienced Chapter II attorney, who will want to thoroughly review recent financial information about every potential debtor. If you are considering Chapter II, bringing all accounting and financial reports up to date should be a priority. Having financial records, such as loan documents and leases, in good order is also very helpful. It is also recommended that all past-due tax returns be filed, even if payments due are not made.

What pre-filing actions should not be taken before filing Chapter 11?

Generally, it is a good idea not to do anything out of the ordinary course of business before filing Chapter 11. Once it appears bankruptcy may be needed, no expenditures should be made, except those that are approved by the bankruptcy attorney in advance. These will usually be limited to those expenses that are absolutely essential to keeping the business operating.

Payments to creditors on past-due debts is typically not a good idea and usually not necessary to keep the business operating. Payments of bonuses or repayment of loans to business owners or insiders should also be avoided.

Can the debtor issue payroll checks on its regular paydays in Chapter 11?

Ordinarily, yes, but before payroll can be issued, it may be necessary to file a motion with the bankruptcy court to obtain approval to use any funds that are subject to a security interest of a lender. These are known as "motions to use cash collateral."

If a lender has a blanket security interest in all the assets of the debtor, then the debtor is prohibited from spending any cash collateral upon filing the Chapter II petition until the court has entered an order authorizing its use.

What is cash collateral?

Cash collateral is a liquid asset that is subject to a lien or security interest of a creditor. Cash collateral may include cash on deposit or on hand, accounts receivable, rent payments from tenants, insurance policy proceeds, inventory held for sale, and/or the proceeds arising from the sale of any asset, including real estate, if subject to the lien of a creditor.

Can the debtor use cash collateral without court approval?

Under law, the debtor is not allowed to use any cash collateral in a Chapter 11 filing without getting prior consent from the creditor who has the lien on that cash collateral. Although a court order is not necessary if the creditor consents, as a practical matter, creditors virtually never consent to the use of cash collateral without the entry of a court order. The authorization order will typically contain certain provisions protecting the creditor's position in connection with the use of cash collateral.

Do I have to be operating a business to file Chapter 11?

No, there is no requirement that there be an operating business to file Chapter II. Preserving the value of assets, even if there is no business, is an acceptable reason to file Chapter II.
